

Wick is getting switched-on to a new network

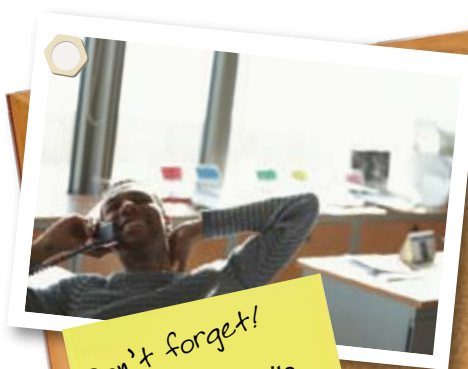

Between 2006 and 2011, BT, in consultation with the UK telecommunications industry, and with input from Ofcom, will be managing the upgrade of its phone, broadband and ISDN lines to a next-generation network.*

The new network is coming to the Wick area soon.

It's designed to enable a new wave of phone and Internet services from a whole range of different companies. To enable the network to be switched-on, most of the engineering work will be carried-out overnight at your local telephone exchange.

Work to switch-on phone lines begins in Wick on the evening of 27th November and will be completed the following morning between midnight and 6am.

To find out how it might affect your phone, broadband or ISDN services, even if you're not a BT customer, look out for the information pack being sent to your home or business. You can also visit www.switchedonuk.org or call us free on 0800 030 4000*

* If you are connected to a cable service, are a customer of Kingston Communications in East Yorkshire, or do not require a BT line for your phone, broadband or ISDN services, you won't be affected by the rollout of BT's new telecommunications network. In these instances, your current telecommunications arrangements will continue to apply. Mobile services will not be directly affected.

 Information line opening hours 8.00am-8.00pm Monday-Friday and 9.00am-5.00pm Saturday and Sunday.
